Megan Hales is a greatly promising artist from Australia, she explores the ever-tightening nexus between natural and human environments. Her oil paintings find delight in everyday chaos, often presenting a seepage of organic life with familiar urban scenarios.

Her painting has her own personal seal, marked by obvious painting skills, Hales has no barriers, her extraordinary skills have been built for over more than ten years: her career extends between being a painter, a muralist and a fabricator. Her work is characterized by a millimetric hyperrealistic detail and a style that evokes cinematography
